

1. While Paul and Silas were sharing the good news in Philippi, a young girl enslaved as a fortune-teller followed them around and told everyone who they were. After many days, Paul was so annoyed that he cast the divining spirit out of her.

2. When those who enslaved the young girl realized that Paul ruined their money-making scheme, they dragged Paul and Silas before the Roman authorities claiming they were outsiders disturbing the peace of their city. As punishment, Paul and Silas were thrown in jail.

4. Paul and Silas gave up their chance to escape because they knew the guard's fate if they did. Moved by their kindness, the guard brought them to his house for his entire family to hear the good news of Jesus.

3. Around midnight, as the songs and prayers of Paul and Silas filled the air, the earth began to shake, and every prison door and chain flew open! The guard was afraid for his life, but Paul cried out, "Don't worry, we're still here!"
